It is noted that claims 4 and 8 appear to be amended but the amendments are not noted as "currently amended."

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

> (a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-12 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Shimizu et al (JP 10337164 A, JP 09248153 A, and JP 08056607 A) in view of Jager et al (DE 19653354 C1).

Shimizu et al (JP 10337164 A, JP 09248153 A, and JP 08056607 A) all disclose the use of xylooligosaccharides in beverages as is claimed (see corresponding abstracts).

The claims differ as to the use of an intense sweetener.

Jager et al disclose the use of oligoosaccharides to increase the sweetening power and enhance the taste of an acesulfame K/aspartame mixture (see abstract).

It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art, at the time the invention was made, to use intense sweeteners such as acesulfame K/aspartame as taught by Jager et al in that of any of the Shimizu et al documents because the use of intense sweeteners in beverages is well-known in the art. In addition, the combination of oligosaccharides with intense sweeteners is well-known

Applicant's arguments filed October 15, 2003 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that Shimizu teaches away from the recited intense sweeteners, and that there is no motivation to combine the references.

Shimizu et al (JP 10337164 A, JP 09248153 A, and JP 08056607 A) teach the conventional use of xylooligosaccharides in beverages.

In response to applicant's argument that there is no suggestion to combine the references, the examiner recognizes that obviousness can only be established by combining or modifying the teachings of the prior art to produce the claimed invention where there is some teaching, suggestion, or motivation to do so found either in the references themselves or in the knowledge generally available to one of ordinary skill in the art. See In re Fine, 837 F.2d 1071, 5 USPQ2d 1596 (Fed. Cir. 1988) and In re Jones, 958 F.2d 347, 21 USPQ2d 1941 (Fed. Cir. 1992). In this case, the prior art is directed to the conventional use of oligosaccharides in the food art.

Once the art has recognized the use of xylooligosaccharides in beverages the use and manipulation of any and all xylooligosaccharides would be no more than obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art. The prior art clearly teaches the claimed components for the same function as is claimed. Applicant has not established unexpected results.

Attention is invited to In re Levin, 84 USPQ 232 and the cases cited therein, which are considered in point in the fact situation of the instant case, and wherein the Court stated on page 234 as follows:

This court has taken the position that new recipes or formulas for cooking food which involve the addition or elimination of common ingredients, or for treating them in ways which differ from the former practice, do not amount to invention, merely because it is not disclosed that, in the constantly developing art of preparing food, no one else ever did the particular thing upon which the applicant asserts his right to a patent. In all such cases, there is nothing patentable unless the applicant by a proper showing further establishes a coaction or cooperative relationship between the selected ingredients which produces a new, unexpected, and useful function. In re Benjamin D. White, 17 C.C.P.A (Patents) 956, 39 F.2d 974, 5 USPQ 267; In re Mason et al., 33 C.C.P.A. (Patents) 1144, 156 F.2d 189, 70 USPQ 221.

All of the claim limitations and arguments have been considered. None of them are seen as serving as basis for patentability.

No claim is allowed.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
